Abstract

In this two-part presentation, recent research on the language basis of reading will be reviewed through a developmental lens. Poor reader subgroups - dyslexia and developmental language disorder - will be described with a focus on early identification and intervention within the context of current legislation and advocacy efforts. Participants will walk away with new insights for evidence-based practice and practical information on how to improve reading outcomes.

Learner Outcomes

At the end of the presentation, participants will be able to:

- Explain to a colleague the main components of language and how they support reading comprehension over time.
- Describe how dyslexia and developmental language disorder are the same and how they are different.
- List two ways participants will change their practices, based on what was learned today.

Faculty

Tiffany Hogan, PhD, CCC-SLP

Tiffany P. Hogan, PhD, CCC-SLP, is a professor in the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders at MGH Institute of Health Professions in Boston, Massachusetts, director of the Speech and Language (SAiL) Literacy Lab and research associate at Harvard University. Dr. Hogan has published over 100 papers on the genetic, neurologic and behavioral links between oral and written language development, with a focus on improving assessment and intervention for children with developmental language disorder, dyslexia and/or speech sound disorders. Her advocacy for children with reading difficulties has led her to co-found a DLD informational website: www.dldandme.org, host a podcast, SeeHearSpeak Podcast (www.seehearspeakpodcast.com) and contribute information for articles in numerous news outlets including the New York Times, the Boston Globe, along with several television and radio appearances.

Disclosure Statement

Relevant Financial Relationships: Tiffany Hogan will be receiving an honorarium from NJSHA for her presentation.

Relevant Non-Financial Relationships: Tiffany Hogan does not have any nonfinancial relationships to disclose.

The International Dyslexia Association is a non-profit Scientific and Education organization for the study and treatment of children with specific language disability (dyslexia). The New Jersey branch does not endorse any specific program; it supports efforts to provide individuals with dyslexia with appropriate instruction and to identify these individuals at an early age.

The mission of the New Jersey Speech-Language-Hearing Association (NJSHA) is to serve audiologists, speech-language pathologists and speech, language or hearing scientists by providing resources, information, programs and services that meet members' needs; promoting public awareness; and advocating for professional standards, legislation and regulation necessary to provide the highest quality of care for the individuals they serve.
